ALAS, POOR DOBBIN!

Ah, Dobbin, you're a has-been now, you've had your little day. No wonder that your briny tears are falling on the hay. Your master has a big machine that's painted red and green; it has a louder voice than yours and feeds on gasoline. Some day he'll weary of his car and hunt another toy, but don't you fool yourself and think he'll turn to you, my boy; the airship offers him a chance to scorch along the clouds, and he may fall and break his neck before admiring crowds; but whether in a motor car or airship he may flit, it's all the same to you, old hoss! You'll never WALT MASON.
